

Robert Burns wrote a famous poem called 'To a Mouse', and our story this week, 'The Gruffalo' stars one little brown mouse, can you think of other stories or poems that feature one mouse or more ?

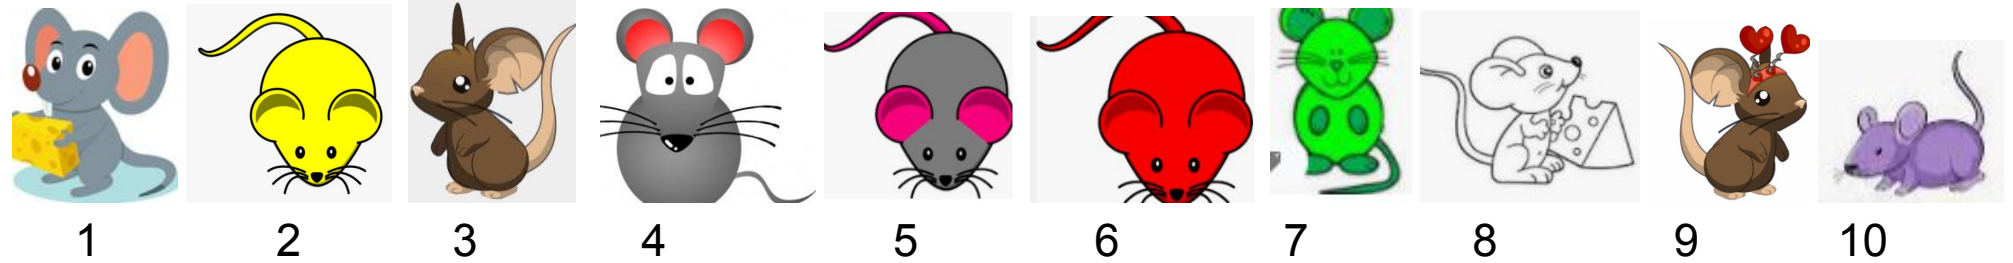

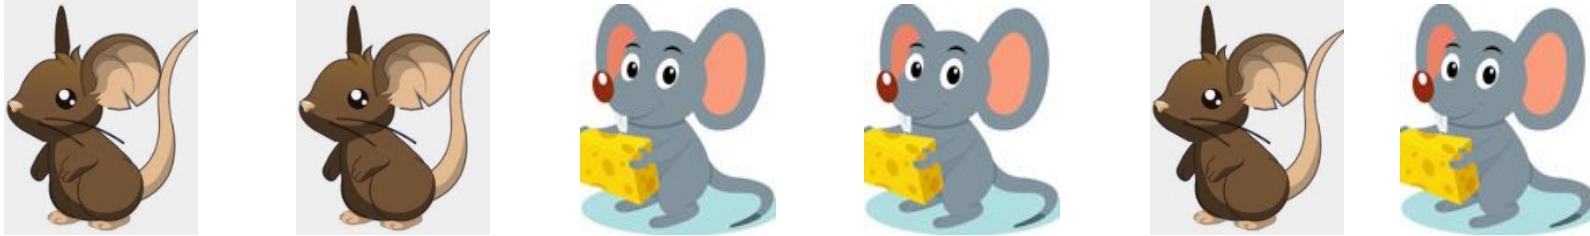

Below you will see some mice, can you count them?

How many mice are there now ?

How many brown mice can you see ?
How many grey mice can you see?

Can you use the pictures above to answer these questions.

What number is the yellow mouse?

Which numbered mice are eating cheese?

What number is the purple mouse?

What numbered mouse comes after the red mouse?

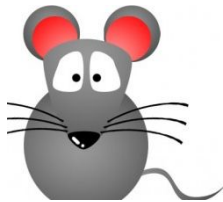

What numbered mouse is before the purple mouse?

1

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

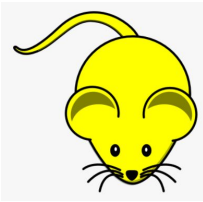

10

Which numbered mouse is missing above?

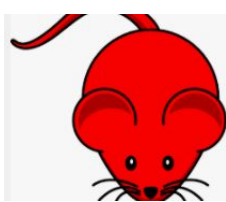

1

2

3

6

5

4

7

8

9

10

Can you work out which numbered mice are in the wrong places?

Hopefully you will not find any mice in your house but I am sure you could find lots of numbers or things to count, why not try some of these ideas, or think of some of your own:

- Go on a number hunt
- Count how many teddies you have
- Count how many rooms there are

When you go out you could try these ideas:

- Go on a number hunt
- Count how many lamp posts are on your street
- Choose a colour of car to spot and count how many you see
- Look out for numbers that are the same

Have fun with counting.