

Will your school Shine a light on Autism?

Autism Initiatives Scotland are asking people to shine a light on Autism in 2012.

April 2nd is World Autism Awareness Day where people across the globe raise awareness of Autism Spectrum Conditions which affect 1 in 100 people in the UK.

Would your school like to be part of this international celebration and help raise awareness and vital funds for people with autism in Scotland?

We are asking schools to hold a dress it up blue day during March or April. Pupils could wear their own clothes for a donation, and even wear something blue.

This is part of the campaign started by Autism Speaks who last year managed to get thousands of buildings across the globe to light up blue for autism awareness.

This year we are encouraging Edinburgh schools, buildings and businesses to go blue for autism awareness.

There are 50,000 people across Scotland living with autism. With your help we can shine a light on this often invisible disability.

The Empire State building went blue, will your school do the same?

For more information and ideas please contact Charlotte Taylor on 0131 220 1075 or email

Charlotte.Taylor@aiscotland.org.uk

www.autisminitiatives.org

www.lightitupblue.org

Autism Initiatives Scotland
real partnerships, unique solutions, positive outcomes